introducing Design Review to AutoCAD: Design Review enables users to capture, review, and share feedback on their design. It also shows you suggestions for improvements, and shows the user who you are communicating with. Design Review is a great way to increase productivity, review ideas, and share ideas. You can now open up Design Review directly from the Design Tools menu (Ribbon: Open Design Review). The tool works in any AutoCAD application. When you open a drawing in Design Review, the document is automatically uploaded to your server for feedback, which can be reviewed by the designer in real time. When you review feedback, you can annotate the drawing or change the design of the drawing. Design Review now works with the following markup tools: Cross-references: when you cross-reference objects in a drawing, AutoCAD now automatically opens a Design Review page, where you can view the cross-reference in your drawing. The design review page allows you to review the document in the context of the drawing, get your feedback, and share the document. Group markers: any drawings you create with the Group Marker tool can now be added to a Design Review drawing for easy review and collaboration. Just right-click the drawing and choose Add to Design Review. Any of the objects you placed with the Group Marker tool will appear in the Design Review page. Revit.rvt files: Revit now imports and exports as.rvt format files, making it easier to share and review Revit designs. You can also review.rvt files created in Revit 2014 or newer. When you open the.rvt file in Design Review, it will automatically add the drawing to the Design Review page. Design Review works with the following review tools: AutoCAD Team Software: Design Review is part of AutoCAD Team Software. If you're on an AutoCAD Team License, you can check the box "Use Team Software with Design Review," and a link will appear to view your team member's Design Review page. Design Review supports multiple users who can view, change, and annotate the document simultaneously. Designs are displayed as a thumbnail in a viewport. To view designs, you just need a Web browser
