What's new in Elden Ring:

Can anyone help me to understand what these lines from Super Meat Boy means? The first one I understood, but 2nd one is foreign to me... 2nd line, from the beginning of this text: Well... good luck, friend. I hope you understand the joke. Thanks! A: Well, it's indeed a little joke, but to be honest, I'm not sure if I understand the joke. Maybe I'm not good at this ;) I'll just translate what I think I understood: 1st line: Well... good luck, friend. I hope you understand the joke. It's a very typical "good luck" line, but the friend part was a punchline. This is what I think it meant: "well... good luck, friend, I hope you understand the joke". Therefore the first part must be some kind of response to a request by the 2nd line, so the meaning is: "Oh, it's OK, I'll assume you've thought the same as me... and we're both happy you're having so much fun.". The same goes for the second line: 2nd line, from the beginning of this text: Well... good luck, friend. I hope you understand the joke. Well... good luck, friend. I hope you understand the joke. is the request of the previous line. "Well... good luck, friend. I hope you understand the joke." is the response, and the listener should assume the same as I do. So that means: "Oh... OK, friend, if you think like me. Happy you like this, and you're having fun!". In conclusion, I'm not sure I actually understand the joke, but I suppose you don't either, since it appears the joke isn't very clear. A: You are trapped in a maze, with this image for reference: (By the way, love the level design here) So my interpretation is that the first part is respond to the second part. Good luck, friend, I hope you understand the joke. Oh yeah, I guessed the first part. I've once played a press and shame game (can't recollect which) but the pair are free to talk anything (as long as it's kind heartening). The second part is telling you is happy you've enjoyed the game.
