All the beads and the release blue are clean and everything looks good. In this condition the bike looks much better than the pictures indicate. It will be a head turner at your local shop. If you live in NC I can come get the bike to save you shipping. The bike has a lot of history and has never been ridden. Not really new. The first set of 2" tires on the bike are really worn out. Are there any original NOS UDT tires? 73's serial number with split in the serial number and a long stripe like in the mongoose kos kruiser 1970 series/ 1976 series/ 1978-80 series. Can you find the original set of wheels? Thanks Hi...I've got a 1980 26 mongoose serial number.... it has a silver slip in the serial number, and the tube number is 881792. It was purchased at an I.N.S.E. show in 1980. I would like to have a copy of the frame to put on my web page. I have a 1981 Kos Kruiser 20 inch BMX that is complete. There is no motor, chain or chainguide. This bike shows 23 more and has the correct pattern decals that match the 80's version. This is an ultra rare model. If you want to see what it looks like and have questions. Please call or e-mail.Q: Javascript MVC Framework I have a client side application, I want to refactor it and make it more modular. The applications makes heavy use of javascript. There is now a need to have a models folder (not in the root of the project) containing data model for use in the application. How would I go about this? Should I make an MVC framework for the models, but have the models being a JS file? A: The JavaScript should not be your model. You use the JavaScript to produce the data the user views. You don't view the data directly. Your models, whether JavaScript or in a separate file, should be strictly related to business logic. You can do all the application-visible work in JavaScript with no trouble at all. Just think about the JavaScript models you would use for drawing a graph of customer accounts or whatever. There is nothing inherent in JavaScript that makes it a poor choice for models, anything you can do in JavaScript, you can do from any language

In the mid-70s, and during the time of the Black Sabbath record, the band considered the famous American record producer Norman Smith to be a significant contributor to their career. As with any major success, there were always gripes. And in March 1970, the band hit it big with the release of "Paranoid" with their album Live at Knebworth.. On top of all this, I went to England in November to meet all the bands and the English press as well. I stopped by the Black Sabbath retreat in Sussex called "No 1 Mersea," which they actually owned. In those days, there were no recordings, and because the band had to meet with the label in London, I had to be there for two days. My job was to go around and interview the bands for some upcoming magazines. I showed up at the retreat and was surprised to find the Sabbath with the band's van and a couple of.
