A: This question is two years old and has a very low view count. It's a Windows application so there is no reason to show the Crossover Games on there, and the application is a.exe and not a.zip or anything else that they would normally show. It's an older game and the likelihood of anyone having a pirated copy of this program is slim. Maybe they thought it was notable that this wasn't a complete Windows application.

[The seroepidemiology of hepatitis B in the Aosta Valley]. The prevalence of anti-hepatitis B surface antigen (HBs Ag) antibodies was determined in a population (n = 1738) of children and adults living in the Aosta Valley. Seropositivity was found in all subjects: anti-HBs positivity in 1616 subjects (94.9%) and anti-HBc positivity in 1177 subjects (66.8%). Anti-HBs prevalence was markedly increased in children of mothers who had been vaccinated against hepatitis B (anti-HBs prevalence: 18.9% vs. 7.8%). Prenatal vaccination seemed to be a significant factor contributing to the decrease of chronic hepatitis B in adulthood.

The investigation shows that Reuters employees deleted data from an unused computer only after Reuters' lawyers told them it was time to stop. Upon the conclusion of the investigation, the 10 employees who either participated in the deletion or had knowledge of it were discharged. None of the 11 employees who participated in the deletion were disciplined by Reuters. The probe concluded that six Reuters employees that participated in the deletion did not have "clear understanding of the scope of the anti-spoofing rules." The investigation also shows that no responsible senior executives at Reuters first-hand learned of the deletion until a year after the incident and while the investigation was taking place. In addition, Reuters' lawyers did not disclose the existence of the investigation to Reuters' senior executives until after the investigation was completed, despite a Reuters lawyer previously telling the SEC that it would be possible for any of the 11 employees to be disciplined as a result of the investigation. In the case of semiconductor devices, there are numerous types of devices known. In particular, integrated circuits (IC) comprise large numbers of interconnected devices such as transistors. In addition, the IC's are often sealed within a package to limit the access to the interior of the package, to protect the IC and to provide a means for lead external devices to communicate with the IC. It is also commonplace for semiconductor devices to have an interconnect structure for connecting a die on which the IC is fabricated to a lead frame. Integrated circuits are formed on semiconductor wafers. The wafers are subject to numerous processing steps before the final IC device is produced.
