DeepGeoTech Magnetometer Viewer Crack+ [April-2022]

Parses the CSV file into the two columns (DateTime.txt) and the respective arrays (VpKMACoArray.txt) that represent the records. The tool is also capable of combining the two columns and use the DateTime column for the analysis of the GMTSK pulses by the user. That means, using the tool it's possible to get detailed info of the time, day, month, year, hour, minute and second of the record. It's also possible to plot those details on a 1 to 30 minute interval using the time slider (in the "Time Slider" tab). It's also possible to use the time slider to see the variations of the timing differences for the analyzed pulses. Features: Key macro allows to execute from the command line or from a file. The macro loads a CSV file, and parses the file into two columns, a column with DateTime and a column with the calculated VpKMACoArray (VpKMACoArray.txt). The macro has an output file with the same name of the input file. The output file has a tab for the original text file where you can see the parsed data. The output file also has a tab for the dates and time array where you can plot the variations of the timing differences for the analyzed pulses. In addition, the user can plot the GMTSK pulse record using the tool. It's possible to select the range of the time intervals to plot. This tool is free. Please, send to bug tracker your suggestions. The tool is freeware and open source. To understand how this tool works please refer to the description below. The program can be executed using the following command line parameters: -c - if the CSV file has a key specified, the program loads the CSV file and saves the record in a CSV file named: csvInputFileName.csv -k - if the CSV file has a key specified, the program loads the CSV file and saves the record in a CSV file named: csvOutputFileName.csv -d - if the CSV file has a key specified, the program loads the CSV file and saves the record in a CSV file named: datesOutputFileName.csv Using the macro key you can execute the 2edc1e01e8
