According to police, the incident happened around 2:30 pm Sunday in the 600 block of West Emily. There, the woman confronted three dogs and pushed them around, then struck at the animals with her hands. That's when police say a woman nearby came to the dogs' aid and called 911. Police arrived to find the woman in another yard nearby where they said she jumped on a dog and shoved it with both hands. When the dogs ran off, the woman jumped in her truck, police said, but moments later was seen running after the animals again. Police said the woman managed to get a hold of one of the dogs and that's when they tried to intervene and arrest her. That's when police said the woman ran off into a crowd of people -- not realizing police were right behind her. A man in the crowd opened a car door and dragged the woman into his car. A woman working at a deli across the street said she had called 911 moments before and was told the woman she was trying to arrest had just been caught on camera running after the dogs. When the officers arrived, police said the woman was willing to talk to them. She didn't have her wallet on her so she didn't have identification, police said, but gave officers information about her car and a recent trip to Minnesota.Dalmatian [TJ] I try and avoid dog stories, (and it's hard to actually find any), but I really love this article about Dalmatians! With a storybook pedigree and unblemished, sweet-looking face, it's no wonder that the Dalmatian has been a favorite canine of adults and children alike for centuries. Dalmatians' grace is something that usually comes naturally to them-but while Dalmatians are happy in their puppyhood, they
